TRUMP ENDS 'DREAMER' IMMIGRATION PROGRAM

1 President Donald Trump scrapped an Obama-era program that protects from deportation immigrants brought illegally into the United States as children, delaying implementation until March and giving a gridlocked Congress six months to decide the fate of almost 800,000 young people. As the so-called Dreamers who have benefited from the five-year-old program were plunged into uncertainty, business and religious leaders, mayors, governors, Democratic lawmakers, unions, civil liberties advocates and former President Barack Obama all condemned Trump's move. The action was announced not by Trump but by Jeff Sessions, his attorney general, who called the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program an unconstitutional overreach by Obama. There will be an "orderly, lawful wind-down," Sessions said.

IRMA BARRELS TOWARD THE CARIBBEAN

2 Highly dangerous Category 5 Hurricane Irma rolled toward the Caribbean and southern United States, packing winds of 185 miles per hour on Tuesday, even as Texas and Louisiana still reeled from devastating Hurricane Harvey. Irma's eye was forecast to cross the northern Leeward Islands, east of Puerto Rico, on Tuesday night or early Wednesday, and hurricane warnings were in place from there to the British and U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, the U.S. National Hurricane Center (NHC) said in a statement. The NHC called Irma a "potentially catastrophic" Category 5 hurricane and tweeted that it was "the strongest hurricane in the Atlantic [Ocean] outside the Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Mexico in NHC records." Category 5 is the highest NHC designation.

REPORT: RED SOX STOLE SIGNS FROM YANKEES USING APPLE WATCH

3 A report released by Michael S. Schmidt of the New York Times on Tuesday revealed that the Boston Red Sox used an Apple Watch to steal signs from the New York Yankees during the 2017 regular season: "Investigators for Major League Baseball have determined that the Boston Red Sox, who are in first place in the American League East and likely headed to the playoffs, executed a scheme to illicitly steal hand signals from opponents' catchers in games against the second-place Yankees and other teams, according to several people briefed on the matter." The "scheme" was noticed by the Yankees, a few weeks ago when they noticed a member of Boston's training staff looking at his Apple Watch in the Red Sox dugout and then giving players information.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

SUB OWNER: JOURNALIST KILLED BY HATCH COVER

4 Swedish journalist Kim Wall died when she was accidentally hit by a heavy hatch cover onboard a homemade submarine, the Danish owner of the vessel testified in court on Tuesday. Peter Madsen, who denies killing Wall, said he was holding the hatch for her but it slipped and hit her head as they sailed in the strait between Denmark and Sweden last month on the UC3 Nautilus submarine he had built. Madsen, 46, was speaking in court after being charged with killing the Swedish journalist on the submarine and mutilating her body — a case bearing many of the attributes of the region's popular Nordic Noir books and films. It could mean a sentence of five years to life in prison for Madsen, if found guilty. The court on Tuesday ordered a psychiatric evaluation and that Madsen be kept in custody for four weeks.

FACEBOOK'S NEXT STEP TO MONETIZE WHATSAPP

5 Facebook Inc. is gearing up to make money from WhatsApp, the messaging service used by more than a billion people every day, the Wall Street Journal reported on Tuesday. WhatsApp will be testing new features to make it easier for people to communicate with businesses they want to reach on WhatsApp, the messaging service said on a blog post. "We're building and testing new tools via a free WhatsApp Business app for small companies and an enterprise solution for bigger companies operating at a large scale with a global base of customers, like airlines, e-commerce sites, and banks," according to the blog post. WhatsApp has already started a pilot program that would feature a green badge next to a business contact, indicating that the business was verified by the messaging service.

Daily ticket checks begin on the Commuter Rail

Through the Fare is Fair initiative, Commuter Rail conductors will carry out random ticket checks in an effort to stave off fare evasions.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Commuter Rail riders be warned: Daily random ticket checks are now in the works.

The MBTA and Keolis Commuter Services, operating company of the Commuter Rail, began the Fare is Fair initiative on Tuesday as an attempt to crack down on fare evasions, which lead to millions of dollars lost each year, officials said.

Fare is Fair "events," which are random ticket checks, are not completely new. Previously, these checks happened about six to eight times per year, Keolis said.

Now, random ticket checks will be a daily occurrence.

"Making Fare is Fair ticket checks a daily occurrence is an important part of our efforts to modernize commuter rail ticketing and bring best practices to the network," David Scorey, CEO and general manager of Keolis, said in a statement.

"Similar passenger rail systems in the United States and in cities around the world utilize a variety of strategies, including events such as these, to educate passengers on ticketing options and reduce fare evasion," he added. "Our intention is to incorporate many of these practices in a way that is effective in Boston."

Ticket checks will occur at stations throughout the Commuter Rail network, beginning with off-peak times. As commuters become more aware of the practice, Keolis said, checks will happen at peak commute times.

North Station is the first to see the new initiative, with ticket checks occurring midday on Tuesday and Wednesday. Checks will then take place at Back Bay Station mid-day on Thursday and at South Station midday on Friday.

"Future schedules will be made available as appropriate," the company said in a statement.

Boarding a Commuter Rail train doesn't require tapping your Charlie Card like when getting on the T. Riders can instead purchase passes based on zones that correlate with their commute, load trips onto Charlie Tickets, purchase trips through the mTicket App or pay with cash on board.

These methods require train coaches to visibly check or hole punch tickets, but when coaches are crowded, conductors can't check all the tickets, according to Keolis. That means many passengers don't have to activate their app ticket, have their paper ticket punched or pay with cash while on board.

A new initiative will check that passengers have paid on MBTA Commuter Rail trains. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Officials say the Fare is Fair ticket checks will happen before passengers board. Keolis said that trains will not be held while passengers' tickets are checked, "but Fare is Fair staff will ensure lines are minimized to ensure passengers make their scheduled trains." The millions in fares that are lost when passengers don't pay for a ticket is money that could be invested into "critical network, fleet and service improvements," Scorey said.

More modern efforts are coming soon, he added. Keolis is currently designing plans to incorporate ticketing-checking gates at its three major stations (North Station, South Station and Back Bay Station) as well as transition to onboard ticket scanners.

The MBTA's Commuter Rail is the fifth-largest commuter rail operation in North America, according to Keolis. It carries about 127,000 passengers every day to 138 stations over 394 miles.

Walsh declares Pete Frates Day in Boston to honor ALS icon

Pete Frates, former captain of the Boston College baseball team, was the inspiration behind the Ice Bucket Challenge.

Mayor Marty Walsh declared Tuesday to be Pete Frates Day in Boston, honoring the former Boston College baseball captain whose personal battle with ALS inspired the Ice Bucket Challenge.

Frates, a Beverly native, was diagnosed with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), also called Lou Gehrig's disease, when he was 27 years old.

Since then, Frates and his family have worked to raise awareness for the neurodegenerative disease, most notably sparking the viral Ice Bucket Challenge.

That campaign helped raise more than $220 million worldwide.

"Pete Frates has become a symbol of courage and determination first to New Englanders as captain of the Boston College Eagles baseball team and now to the entire world by championing a cure for the deadly disease known as ALS," Mayor Walsh wrote in a proclamation.

The event coincided with the release of a new book about Frates, "The Ice Bucket Challenge: Pete Frates and the Fight Against ALS," by Casey Sherman and Dave Wedge.

Meghan Markle earned a Vanity Fair cover

Listen, I like Meghan Markle. But I'd like to remind you that if she weren't dating Prince Harry, she'd just be a regular ol' actress with a role on a USA network show. Regular ol' actresses on the USA network don't get Vanity Fair covers — but Meghan Markle has. And the "Suits" actress is conveniently opening up about her "true love" with Prince Harry.

"I can tell you that at the end of the day, I think it's really simple," she says. "We're two people who are really happy and in love.

"I'm sure there will be a time when we will have to come forward and present ourselves and have stories to tell," she continues. "But I hope what people will understand is that this is our time. This is for us. It's part of what makes it so special, that it's just ours." Aw. If I wasn't dead inside, that would touch my heart parts.

John Legend tried, failed to dump Chrissy Teigen

Allow me to explain: In an interview with The Guardian, the paper notes that Legend and Teigen — who married in 2013 — have been together for 10 years. Except for one time for a whole half-hour. "I was really stressed and busy," he says. "I was just like: 'I'd just be happier single right now,' and she was like: 'No.'" LOL.

Classic Teigs.

Teigen confirmed as much via Twitter, saying "It wasn't a typical break up. He was on tour and his voice hurt and he was being a whiny face about everything and so yeah, I was like 'no.'" Atta girl.

So yeah, these two are still my faves. Ugh.

It obviously didn't go as planned.

The Kardashians are still shunning Caitlyn Jenner

Remember when Caitlyn Jenner wrote that hot mess memoir "The Secrets of My Life?" You know, the one where she described her sex life with Kris, even though nobody asked? Well, the Kardashians are still mad about it — so much so that they basically don't talk to Jenner anymore.

The former Olympian opened up about her fractured relationship in an interview with "Good Morning Britain" — to that over-the-top aspiring-Voldemort type, Piers Morgan.

"Since the book came out, I've never talked to Kris again. Kim, I haven't talked to in six, nine months, whatever it is.

"I love Kim. She's a great person," she continued. "It's a big loss in my life, not having her there anymore."

Jenner is still in touch with daughters Kendall — the Pepsi one — and Kylie — the one with the wigs.

Girl, I guess.

Well, Caitlyn. You dug your own grave, filled with maybe lies and support of Trump, so. Lie in it, or whatever.

Katy & Orlando went paddleboarding again

A year and change since that time Orlando Bloom and his exposed dick went paddle boarding with Katy Perry, the two have found romance on the water again. Only this time, Bloom managed to keep his junk in his swim trunks.

Over Labor Day weekend, the extra exes were spotted partaking in the water sport on a beach in Cali, and are maybe back together, per a source at E! News. In August, the 32-year-old ratchet pop star and 40-year-old man-elf were seen canoodling at an Ed Sheeran concert. (Man, their dates are such snoozes!)

Thankfully, Orlando kept his junk in his trunks.

Perry is being vague about whether they are a thing again or not. A couple weeks back, during an interview at Sirius XM's "The Morning Mashup," the "Swish Swish" singer talked around the issue, making noncommittal statements like, "It's nice to keep people you love around you," and "When you get older, lines get blurred."

Bloom and Perry first broke up/decided to take "respectful, loving space from each other" back in February, after dating seven months. Getting back together is kinda lame, but hey, it's basically cuffing season, so we can't blame 'em.

Solange announces Boston show to help Harvey victims

The singer is getting involved with the relief effort.

MATT JUUL
letters@metro.us

Singer Solange is doing her part to help victims in her hometown of Houston in the wake of Hurricane Harvey's devastation.

The Grammy Award-winner announced she'll be performing a concert in Boston this month to benefit those affected by the hurricane. All proceeds from the special "Orion's Rise" performance will go toward Harvey relief efforts.

The show is scheduled for Sept. 28 the Orpheum Theatre and will also featuring an opening performance by jazz group the Sun Ra Arkestra.

Solange wrote in her announcement on Instagram that she's dedicated to helping the storm-ravaged city.

"I'm committed to partnering with organizations on the ground in Houston and making contributions to uplift the city that raised me with so much love," the 31-year-old star wrote. "See you September 28th Boston, I thank you in advance for making this a special meaningful night!"

Solange's sister Beyoncé has offered to pitch in with the relief effort as well via her BeyGOOD foundation.

Solange was previously scheduled to perform at this year's Boston Calling Music Festival but was forced to cancel at the last minute and was replaced by hip-hop group Migos. However, she did promise to make it up to her fans in Boston, who'll finally get to see her in town when she takes over the Orpheum Theatre later this month.

Aya Cash: You can't live in this world and not suffer from anxiety

In Season 4 of "You're the Worst," Gretchen (Aya Cash) is spiraling after Jimmy ghosted her in the season 3 finale.
AUTUMN DE WILDE/FX

The "You're the Worst" actress talks how she stays sane — and how Gretchen doesn't in season four of the FXX comedy.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Where we last left off in "You're the Worst" — the season three finale — Jimmy (Chris Geere) had just proposed to Gretchen (Aya Cash) and then impulsively driven away, abandoning her on a mountain in L.A. The new season, out today, is all about the eccentric and destructive ways our favorite trash people on TV are (separately) coping with the trauma of the breakup.

Jimmy has moved to a trailer park for retirees, passing the time drinking whiskey and binge watching "The Fall Guy" with a geriatric misanthrope after his own heart. Gretchen now lives with Lindsey — who miraculously sort of has her shit together, with a job she loves and a friends-with-benefits sitch with Edgar — literally hasn't left the apartment in three months and has also casually started smoking crack.

Ahead of the season-four premiere, we caught up with Aya Cash — who, unlike Gretchen, is very much not a mess — to talk about how she's staying sane under Trump, her favorite hangs in Brooklyn and her song of the summer.

Do you relate to Gretchen's struggles with anxiety and depression?
I don't know how you can live in this world and not suffer at least a little bit from anxiety and depression.

How are you staying sane under Trump right now?
I'm not? [Laughs] I'm off Twitter, which helps, because at least the news cycle is a little less immediate, which is actually also probably what I miss most about Twitter. It's an attraction and a repulsion. But it's been helpful to me to not be engaged in the minute-to-minute news. I can learn about it in an hour and it will still happen.

Do you find Instagram calmer?
Yeah. Is Trump on Instagram? [Laughs] Oh God, what a nightmare. You know we'd see some dick pics eventually. I have compulsive behaviors with it too, it just hasn't gotten to the extent that I should quit.

You're starring in a film at TIFF, "Mary Goes Round." Can you tell us about that?
It's a microbudget indie with a first-time filmmaker [Molly McGlynn]. I read the script and Skyped with the director and fell madly in love with her. It's about a woman who is an alcoholic and an addiction counselor. Her life is falling apart when she receives a message from her estranged father to come home and help with her sister who she's never met, because he's dying. It's a coming-home story and an addiction story and it's a really beautiful little movie.

What are some of your favorite hangs in Brooklyn?

One of my best friends owns a bar called Donna in South Williamsburg, so if I'm going to go to a bar I go there, even though I live nowhere near there. There's a restaurant called Rucola which was my local. I'm not really a going-out kind of person so I don't have any club recommendations [laughs], but places in my old neighborhood like Mile End and Building on Bond, and BookCourt was my favorite bookstore. Books are Magic opened over the summer, and I'm so excited to go back and go to it.

You're a big reader. Any favorite recent reads?

I just finished "Stoner" by John Williams, it was just incredible. I cried at the end and looked around, like, "What am I doing with my life? What's important?" I had asked for recommendations on Twitter for books and Carrie Coon sent me a list, none of which I'd ever heard of, so I just bought everything she recommended. I just started "The Argonauts" [by Maggie Nelson] and I'm really enjoying that; her structure is very interesting.

GETTY IMAGES

Most important, can we talk about your dog?

Yes! I'll talk about my dog all day. Her name is Lucy Tami Cash. Tami is for Tami Taylor on "Friday Night Lights." We also call her Goose. She's a 22-pound terrier mix rescue and she's the love of my life. She's doing the entire "Hamilton" mixtape choreographed dance, one by one on Instagram.

Any music you've been into lately?

Every summer I get obsessed with one mildly offensive pop song. This summer it was "I Spy" by Kyle. It's pretty bad. At one point they say, "All my bitches come in pairs like balls in my nutsack." So, you know, really, really classy shit.

Speaking of classy shit, is Gretchen getting a tramp stamp?

No! People saw that on Instagram and kept asking. I have one and have to get tattoo coverup every time we film a sex scene because I don't have permission by the artist — because I was 18, and don't know who did it — to show it. It's of a giant hawk. My name supposedly means "hawk," but it also may or may not mean "ouch," so it works either way. That's my 18-year-old me in the '90s tattoo.

Make over your home office for fall

Trick yourself into doing work by transofrming your home office into a place you don't being. ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK

Tips from the author of "Unf*ck Your Habitat" on how to refresh your home workspace.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Whether you work from home or often bring work home with you, persuading yourself to be productive in the place where you live is always challenging. There are so many distractions and comfortable places to lounge, like, your bed, that it's a wonder we ever get anything done. Now that summer is petering out, we all tell ourselves we're going to buckle down. But if you're filled with dread every time you glance over at your messy desk, you'll likely head straight to the couch and queue up the Netflix instead.

The trick is, well, learning to trick yourself into doing the work by making your home office a place that you don't hate being. Rachel Hoffman, the author of "Unf*ck Your Habitat," tells us her hacks for making your home workspace positive and clutter-free.

Personalize it

"Make it a space where you don't feel like you're being put in time-out," advises Hoffman. She suggests incorporating things that you enjoy, from framed photos to inspirational mood boards.

Or, literally bring life into your work area by adding plants to your desk or your office. "If I put plants in a room, I have to eventually go water them," she says.

Surround yourself with inspiration.

It's important to make yourself comfortable enough that you don't automatically retreat to your bed: "If you're going to invest in one thing, get yourself a good chair so you can do your work and not want to escape," she suggests.

Remember that your workspace doesn't have to look a certain way to be effective. If you do your best work sitting on the couch using a laptop, why not bring a couch into your office?

Cover up your cords

If you have cords running everywhere, your work area will look chaotic, and you'll feel chaotic, too. Investing in cable management, using wraps and covers to conceal all those pesky wires and chargers, will make a big difference in helping you declutter.

Find the storage system that works for you

"People often force themselves to change their organizational style to fit the system they think they should be using," Hoffman says. Instead, figure out how you organize and then come up with a system that works for you.

Not everybody files papers; Hoffman says she prefers to stack them. She fills labeled boxes with tidy stacks of papers and instead using her filing cabinet to store bulky objects, such as her printer.

ROAD TO 19-0 STARTS NOW

The Pats are currently 0-0, but can they rip off 19 wins in a row between now and February?

MATT BURKE

Tom Brady will begin his 18th NFL season this week. GETTY IMAGES

Predicting that the Patriots will win the Super Bowl at the start of an NFL season has become old hat.

In the MMQB's NFL season preview, eight of 10 writers picked the Pats to at least get to this season's Super Bowl and half of them predicted them to win it all. In a business where contrarian viewpoints are all the rage, that is as close to unanimous as you're going to get.

So the Patriots are going to be very good in 2017, the question is simply how good?

Even if Bernard Pollard comes out of retirement and bites into Tom Brady's ACL, it would still be stunning if the Pats did not make the playoffs with Jimmy Garoppolo running the ship. So, the baseline here — worst-case scenario — is simply making the playoffs.

The ceiling? Well, a perfect 19-0 season, of course.

Ten years after coming up a few minutes short of the only 19-0 season in NFL history — the Patriots are favored to finally accomplish the feat this season. The Pats are favored in all 16 of their 2017 regular season games right now and if they get to 16-0 you can bet that they'd be favored to win all three of their playoff games.

Luck and stamina

The Patriots ran out of luck in their quest for a perfect season in 2007 and became fatigued as the season wore on. Luck will again obviously play a factor this time around if the Pats' ultimate goal truly is to go 19-0.

After Thanksgiving in 2007, the run of blowout victories from early in the season was over. Late in the season — the Pats only beat the Eagles at home by three points, they got extremely lucky in a three-point Monday night win over Baltimore, and they only won by three points in the regular season finale that season at the Giants. The AFC title game that season was also a little too close for comfort against San Diego, and it all came crashing down in the Super Bowl loss to the Giants.

The defense — led in part by Tedy Bruschi, Rodney Harrison and Junior Seau — played its age down the stretch. It looked like a tired, beat-up group. Ditto for the offensive line, which the Giants solved quickly in Super Bowl XLII.

This year's Patriots have much younger players in key positions. Brandin Cooks is just entering his prime and Rob Gronkowski is in his prime. The team's star defensive players are all in their mid-late 20s other than Devin McCourty, who is 30 on the nose.

Brady is, of course, ancient by NFL standards — but he's really the only key Pats player who is at risk of having Father Time slap him down in December, January or February.

The schedule

Having a favorable schedule is half the battle if you are even entertaining the thought of going unbeaten. Fortunately for the Pats, they have the fifth easiest schedule in the league entering 2017.

Most of this good fortune is due to the fact that they play in what should be the weakest division in football. The Jets are tanking hard, the Bills are penciled in for only three or four wins and the Dolphins will be relying on Jay Cutler to get them to the promised land.

Roadblocks

Week 1 vs. Chiefs: Yup, it could end this quickly. Remember the beatdown the Chiefs put on the Pats three years ago?

Week 2 at Saints: The last time the Patriots faced Drew Brees in New Orleans, they were pounded, 38-17.

Week 3 vs. Texans: The Texans looked mighty capable of taking down the Pats in that playoff game last season — and that was without J.J. Watt.

Week 10 at Broncos: Denver has been a house of horrors for the Pats since the Carter administration.

Week 11 at Raiders: This one is in Mexico City and Oakland is one of the few AFC teams people are picking that could knock off the Pats.

Week 15 at Steelers: Yeah, the Patriots own the Steelers. But if Big Ben, Le'Veon Bell and Antonio Brown are healthy at home — that's always going to be a tough date.

Aries Be careful not to put blame on the wrong person. You are best off watching what happens before you act. High-pressure tactics will backfire.

Taurus Learn from your mistakes and don't rely on someone else to take care of your responsibilities. Work diligently toward your goal, and don't stop until you are satisfied.

Gemini Partnership problems will develop if honesty is not maintained. Communication will help clear up any uncertainty that you or someone else is feeling.

Cancer A unique approach to an old idea will motivate you. If you believe in what you are doing, you'll gain the support you require to finish what you start.

Leo Don't miss an opportunity due to your responsibilities. Find alternatives that will allow you to follow your dreams and not fall short on your commitments.

Virgo Changes at home will add to your comfort and encourage better relationships with the people you live with. Getting along and pitching in will bring good results.

Libra Get everything in place before you share your plans. Someone you live with or deal with regularly will interfere if you are too open about the changes you want to make.

Scorpio Creative endeavors or networking with people who could help you get ahead will bring results. Participation is key to understanding and gathering information.

Sagittarius An emotional situation will leave you speechless if you aren't diplomatic when discussing personal matters with your peers, friends or relatives. Stick to the facts.

Capricorn If you let your imagination run wild, you will come up with all sorts of interesting ideas and plans that can help you get ahead. Look for new ways to use your talents.

Aquarius Try hard to satisfy all the demands placed on you so that you'll make a greater impact when you lay out plans and ask for backup. Celebrate with someone you love.

Pisces Speak up, but be fair. You'll be contradicted if you don't stick to the facts and give an honest assessment of a situation that involves you. Keep an open mind. EUGENIA LAST
